About South Iceland

The South of Iceland is unique and it is the part of the country visited by far the greatest numbers of foreign travellers. Everything that makes Iceland interesting to visit can be found in South Iceland all the year round. History surrounds you everywhere, both ancient and recent. Other highlights are creative art, culture, flourishing trade and endless possibilities to enjoy outdoor life in all seasons. But above all there is the awesome and rugged nature stretching from the mountains and down to the sea.

In all seasons of the year tourists can find something to their liking. In winter the sun is reflected on the pearly white snow, on long dark winter nights the northern lights dance around the starlit sky and the moon wanders through the clouds. At such times beauty, peace and quiet reign, unforgettable to those who experience it. Trips across the highlands as well as the lowlands are an indescribable adventure during both summer and winter:

The farmers mind their farms. All the year it is busy in the country, and in spring the land is covered with its summer foliage. Life outdoors and trips assume a new form: hiking tours, riding trips, angling in rivers and lakes. Nature takes on a new look: hot springs, lava fields, volcanoes, waterfalls, the highlands, glaciers, rivers and lakes. All life is reborn after the frosts of winter and the countryside is at its most beautiful.

Visit the southern countryside and take a look at the beauty, listen to the wind and the silence, discover the peace and quiet, and last but not least you may discover yourself.

Welcome to South Iceland, we'll be happy to see you.

How to get to South Iceland

It is actually quite easy to get here. We are "just around the corner" from the Reykjavik capital area.

By car you can drive from Reykjavik (30 minutes) and then you enter the west side of South Iceland and can visit attractions like Hveragerði, Þingvellir National Park and Selfoss.

You can enter South Iceland straight from Keflavik via the Grindavik Road (nr: 43) and the South Coast Road (nr: 427).

You can also enter South Iceland from East Iceland, visiting attractions like Höfn, Skaftafell and Jökulsarlón Glacier Lagoon.

By air it is possible to fly to Höfn in Hornafjörður with Eagle Air and from there drive to the west through South Iceland to Reykjavik.

By bus you have a lot of possibilities, day tours, ordinary tickets and passports from the two companies with schedules in South Iceland.

We recommend that you base yourself somewhere in South Iceland and then take day tours from there.

It actually does not matter how you visit us, we will be glad to serve you and show you the very best of South Iceland.

Come and be inspired by South Iceland.

Hveragerði

Great numbers of people pass through or by Hveragerði each year. With a population of about 2300 and located only 45 km from Reykjavík, Hveragerði may be viewed from the vantage point of the Kambar mountain slope, as it spreads out across a 5000 year-old lava field. Throughout the year, pillars of steam may be seen rising up from the town and in summer it is truly a green community, with an abundance of trees. A green revolution is taking place as areas of woodland in and around Hveragerði expand, with the locals working together in order to develop their blossoming town further.

Certainly the most precious gem in the town of Hveragerði is the geothermal area, Geothermal Park. There are not many communities in the world with hot springs literally in their back yard. The Geothermal Park is open during the summer from May to the end of August. In the winter it can be visited by arrangement with the tourist information centre.

A new hot spring area emerged from the ground in the earthquake that shook the southern part of Iceland on 29th May 2008. It is situated on the hillside rising above the town. Several very active hot springs throw colourful mud and clear water up into the air and they are a spectacular sight.

Besides the hot springs, Hveragerði has much to offer. Trout and salmon swim in the Varmá river; berries are for picking on the heath to the west of the town, and the area has many excellent walking routes. Not to mention the swimming pool, hot baths, whirlpools, a natural sauna and a fitness centre. Also the NLFÍ Health and Rehabilitation Clinic offers opportunities to seek health and happiness.

Þorlákshöfn - Ölfus

Ölfus Municipality covers a total area of 750 km² and has a population of about 1700 people. The environment is beautiful with its lava fields, black sand beaches, magnificent mountain views, rich bird life and cliffs. Most inhabitants, or approximately 1500, live in the fishing village of Þorlákshöfn, named after Saint Þorlákur; bishop of Skálholt (1133–1193). The town is important as a port because it has the only viable harbour on Iceland's southern coast.

Fishing boats have put to sea from Þorlákshöfn for hundreds of years. During the days when fishermen rowed out to sea, a fleet of 20–30 boats was common, and the population swelled to three or four hundred during the fishing season. The modern town is young and grew around a fishery company in the 1950s with a population increase in the 1970s after the eruption of Heimaey. Information signs on the history of the town are placed near a walking path leading from the church. Further information and maps are available at the information centre in the Town Hall.

Today the industrial foundations in Þorlákshöfn are ship-outfitting and fish processing factories, together with business and service industries, while the most important industries in the rural part of Ölfus are agriculture, horse breeding and tourist services.

Leisure opportunities are excellent in Ölfus, with hiking and riding paths, the geothermal energy exhibition at mountain Hengill and in Þorlákshöfn an 18-hole golf course, a "football golf course" and a new modern, fully-equipped sports facility with a swimming pool, hot baths, a steam bath, a waterslide and a spa.

Selfoss - Árborg

With a population of over 6500 inhabitants Selfoss is the largest town in South Iceland and is a part of Árborg Municipality which was established in 1998. It also includes the villages Eyrbakki and Stokkseyri. The distance from Reykjavik is 57 km. In addition to the Ring Road, Iceland's main highway, which runs east and west through the town, roads lead from Selfoss in all directions, north to the Golden Circle / Keldur route and south to Stokkseyri / Eyrbakki / the Reykjanes peninsula.

The town is an excellent centre for day tours to the many places of interest in the area. Some salmon is caught downriver from the Ölfusá bridge. All necessary services for tourists (including a hospital, pharmacies, banks, a shopping centre, restaurants and cafés, hotels, a golf course, a cinema, horse farms, a swimming pool, an airport, nice walking routes and much more) are available in Selfoss.

Eyrbakkí - Árborg

The friendly village of Eyrbakkí used to be the largest commercial community and the main harbour on the south coast of Iceland in earlier times. A large number of preserved houses from the period 1890-1920 are situated in Eyrbakkí and therefore a visit is like reverting a 100 years back in time. Other popular tourist attractions are the Eyrbakkí Maritime Museum and the Árnes-sýsla Folk Museum, located at the legendary "The House" in Eyrbakkí, built in 1765. In Eyrbakkí there is also a fine camping site, a guesthouse and a restaurant. On the rocky shore you can witness an amazing view of the Atlantic Ocean, as well as watch the surf break. It is an ideal spot for hiking and bird-watching. The Flói Bird Reserve lies northwest of Eyrbakkí and is an important nesting area.

Stokkseyri - Árborg

The small village of Stokkseyri is renowned for its beautiful seashore, breaking waves and birdlife. Rich handicraft and cultural life is held in high esteem in Stokkseyri. Workshops and galleries, a Ghost Center and the Elves, Trolls and Northern Lights Museum are all situated in a Cultural Centre – an old fish processing factory that has found a new role due to changes in the fishing industry. The Hunting Museum keeps a large collection of mounted animals and firearms and the bunkhouse Þurðarbúð shows an excellent example of how fishermen had to make use of what nature provided. Stokkseyri also offers a splendid seafood restaurant, the guesthouse Kvöldstjarnan, an outdoor swimming pool, kayak sailing tours, a family recreation park with animals and a camping site. Further east from Stokkseyri there is the Knarrarósviti lighthouse, whose architectural design is an interesting blend of functionalism and art nouveau.

Flóahreppur

Flóahreppur is a peaceful municipality situated in South Iceland, between the two large salmon rivers Hvítá and Þjórsá. Flóahreppur is famous for its wide panorama view in all directions, ranges of mountains, glaciers and islands. The area includes Iceland's most voluminous waterfall, Urriðafoss, where Þjórsá river falls off the margin of Þjórsárhraun, a lava field created about 8000 years ago that is one of the largest known lava flows anywhere on earth. Flóahreppur is a paradise for people who love nature and bird-watching. Bird-life around the area has great variety and is an interesting choice for bird-watchers. Here you can see Icelandic birds in their natural environment without any difficulties. Flóahreppur is also ideal for walking, cycling and riding.

Culture in the area has deep historical roots and great emphasis is placed on the preservation of cultural heritage, whether it is crafts, inventions, history, traditional farmhouses or churches. In Flóahreppur you will find a variety of recreational possibilities and services such as accommodation, museums, craft workshops, farm lodgings and country boutiques – to name but a few. Flóahreppur is a vibrant community with a diverse society, which offers a number of events and gatherings, both new and old traditional ones. Flóamanna Saga is one of the Icelandic sagas and preserves memories of this area.

During the period from mid-September until March / April, if you are lucky, you might see pink clouds dancing around up in the air, just like a symphony orchestra playing in the sky, a breathtaking and unforgettable performance. That is what we call the northern lights, but some call it Aurora borealis. That is just one of the winter-charms Flóahreppur has to offer. A visit to Flóahreppur is a unique experience that you will not forget. The people of Flóahreppur welcome you to experience their heritage, beautiful and peaceful environment, but first and foremost all the wonders of Flóahreppur.

Inland Árnessýsla - Uppsveitir

One of Iceland's most popular tourist areas, inland Árnessýsla boasts a wealth of natural wonders and well-marked historical sites. Hot springs and geothermal heat characterise the region and make their impact on the culture of the area, as well as on the historical sites marking milestones in the history of the country and society of Iceland. The inlands in Árnessýsla stretch from Þingvellir to the Þjórsá river and into the central highlands. The inhabitants are about 2600 and live in four municipalities: Bláskógabyggð, Grímsnes- and Grafningshreppur, Hrunamannahreppur and Skeiða- og Gnúpverjahreppur.

Grímsnes- og Grafningshreppur

Borg is a small but growing village. There you will find a nice swimming pool, a campsite, a grocery store and a café. Úlfjótuvatn is the centre for outdoor activities, leader training and summer camps for scouts in Iceland. A number of popular hiking trails are to be found around Hengill mountain. The Eco-village Sólheimar was founded in 1930 and is the first community of its kind in the world. There able and disabled people live and work together. Now it is a charming village of about 100 inhabitants. During the summer there is a program of events at Sóheimar, a very interesting place to visit.

Bláskógabyggð

Laugarvatn

Laugarvatn is a shallow lake, about 2 km² in size, and is located in the inland of Árnessýsla, midway between Þingvellir, Gullfoss and Geysir, 100 km from Reykjavík. Under its floor there are hot springs heating the lake so it is warm and suitable for bathing all year round. On its bank rests a village of over 300 inhabitants, also named Laugarvatn.

The Laugarvatnsfjall mountain with its birch-covered slopes on the west shelters the village and also adds to the charm and beauty of the place. Between the mountain and the lake, north of the village, there is a panoramic point (hringsjá) providing a good view over the lake and its surroundings. In addition, amongst the green hills and woods north of the lake the area is suitable for camping, pony-trekking and hiking. Nearby you will find marked hiking routes.

Just outside Laugarvatn there is a golf course and possibilities of angling in lakes and rivers in the area. Laugarvatn is a popular tourist resort for Icelanders, and it is also the site of educational institutions.

Laugarás

The development of the small village of Laugarás started when geothermal activity was discovered in the area. There are numerous horticultural farms in the region and various services, such as a campsite, a herb garden / farmers' market and the Domestic Animal Park. The Health Care Clinic for the area is located in Laugarás.

Reykholt

The development of the small village of Reykholt started in the first half of the 20th century, when geothermal activity was discovered in the area. There are numerous horticultural farms in the region and increasing services. Reykholt offers a grocery store, a swimming pool, guesthouses, a campsite, greenhouse visits and horse-shows for groups.

Flúðir - Hrunamannahreppur

Flúðir is a rapidly growing community in the centre of Hrunamannahreppur district, about 25 minutes off the main Ring Road. The area is considered to be very fertile and beautiful. Litla-Laxá, a clear spring river, runs through the village in an attractive basin. Miðfell, a small mountain, towers over Flúðir, and gives the surrounding area a distinctive look. Good walking and riding paths lie to the top of Miðfell. Up there you will find an impressive lake and from the top there is a great view over the area.

The main sources of employment in Flúðir are services, industry and horticulture. Geothermal heat is utilised for greenhouses, and here is the biggest mushroom factory in Iceland. The surrounding area is a popular location for summerhouses. Flúðir has excellent services available for visitors. Among those are a grocery store, restaurants, a swimming pool, accommodation in the three-star hotel Icelandair Hótel Flúðir, a camping ground, golf courses, a horse rental, and a small airfield.

Skeiða- og Gnúhverjahreppur

The Þjórsá river valley (Þjórsárdalur) has been a well kept secret for a while but now things are changing. The objective of the Þjórsá Visitor Centre is to provide information on the land and nature, the people and the history of the Þjórsá region and the services available there, with the principal focus on the great Þjórsá river itself. The Þjórsá river valley is one of the most magnificent regions of South Iceland, with diverse nature and colourful history.

There is a medieval farm in Þjórsárdalur called Stöng. It has been estimated that Hekla mountain erupted for the first time in historical times in 1104 AD resulting in the devastation of a settlement of 20 farms in Þjórsárdalur. In 1939 archaeologists excavated the sites of some of these farms, among them the farm Stöng, which had been preserved in exceptionally good condition under thick layers of white volcanic ash. On the occasion of the 1100 year anniversary of the settlement of Iceland in 1974, it was decided to reconstruct a medieval Icelandic farm as they were between 1000-1200 AD. The farm Stöng was without question the best basis for such a reconstruction.

Ásahreppur

Ásahreppur is a community on the western edge of Rangárvallasýsla and takes its name from "the ásar", natural ridges in the area. On the Ring Road the community has its limits from the bridge of Þjórsá river in the west and to the east the boundary is about 500 m from Landvegamót. There has been a bridge across Þjórsá since 1895. Ásahreppur has about 200 inhabitants who have agriculture and service as their main employment. The nature varies between grassy swamps, reclaimable land, farm areas, hills and ridges. The biggest nesting place of the grey lag goose is in the swampy desolated area of Frakkavatn. The structure of habitation is mostly clusters of farms around the ridges, Veteiðsholt cluster; Ás cluster; Ásmundarstaðir cluster; Hamrar cluster; Sumaliðabær cluster; and Kálfholt cluster. In the area of Ásahreppur there are many artificial caves, used as animal houses up to the 20th century, but in the first centuries after the settlement of Icenad it is said they were used for human habitation. Schools and other basic service for the inhabitants of Ásahreppur are kept up in good co-operation with their neighbouring communities in Rangárvallasýsla, Skaftháreppur and Myrdalshreppur.

Hella – Rangárþing ytra

Inhabitants in western Rangárþing (Rangárþing ytra) are about 1600. The borders of the district lie from Ásahreppur district, from Þjórsá river in the west to Vatnajökull glacier in the north. The south border lies from Myrdalsjökull glacier to Eystri-Rangá river. In Rangárþing ytra agriculture flourishes. In the area you can find many well-known nature resources and historical places, for example the mountain of Hekla, Landmannalaugar and the saga-trail of Njáls Saga. The town of Hella is the biggest residential area with about 800 inhabitants. Hella's inhabitants are primarily occupied with services for the agriculture, their surrounding areas and the tourism industry. At Hella there is a bank, a post office, a tourist information centre, a hotel, guesthouses, camping sites, restaurants, shops, a pharmacy, a healthcare centre, a sports centre, a swimming pool, car services, a rescue team, gas stations and other businesses and public services.

Hvolsvöllur – Rangárþing eystra

Hvolsvöllur – Rangárþing eystra with a population of 1750, is a vast district in central South Iceland and ranges from the highlands to the sea. It boasts a great number of geological wonders, a fact which led the area to become part of Katla Geopark a part of the Unesco supported Global Geoparks Network in 2011 along with two other districts to the east: Mýrdalshreppur and Kirkjubæjarklaustur.

Hvolsvöllur is the region's largest town (860 inhabitants) and all operations relating to the eruption in Eyjafjallajökull in 2010 were organised from there. The main industries in the area are agriculture and tourism and Hvolsvöllur is in fact the only town in Iceland that was not established on the coast or by a river; but entirely as a centre of service for the area. Only 106 km from Reykjavik, Hvolsvöllur is surrounded by plentiful recreation areas and natural wonders, all within 15 minutes up to one hour's drive. Peaceful farmlands suddenly and dramatically give way to nearly vertical slopes that reach down to the main road. Kilometre after kilometre of endless black sand beaches hug the shoreline.

Hvolsvöllur is an excellent location as a base from which to explore South Iceland. Its central location makes it ideal for day trips in the region and then back for a good night's sleep in one of the area's many types of accommodation. The farmers' market in the town centre, next to the post office, is a great place to stop. Here you will find a variety of locally produced foodstuffs for sale, locally produced hand-knitted items of all kinds, handicrafts by local artisans, original wooden toys and superb organic ice cream. A lovely green space for stretching one's legs and where the children can run around is adjacent to the farmers' market and hosts an outdoor exhibition by local photographers. There are camping-grounds, youth hostels, guest houses and hotels ranging from 1 to 4 stars. Ferry trips to the Westman Islands are now possible from the new harbour, Landeyjahöfn, which opened in July, 2010 and is just a 20 minutes drive from Hvolsvöllur.

Eyjafjallajökull, that certain volcano with a ridiculously difficult-to-pronounce name that wrought havoc with air travel around most of Europe and even affected many flights to the United States, is located in the district of East Rangárþing and has become one of the area's main attractions, but by no means the only sight to see in the area. The district contains many natural treasures and is also the scene of one of the renowned Icelandic sagas, the Saga of the Burning of Njáll. Some of the most renowned places are for instance Skógar, with its amazingly picturesque Skógafoss waterfall, Seljalandsfoss waterfall, behind which it is possible to walk, and Þórsmörk, which is a beautiful and fertile mountain ridge north of Eyjafjallajökull with various trekking routes in the area and therefore very popular among hikers.

There is a great variety of activities in the area for those who wish to explore the sites with local guides.

Vestmannaeyjabær

There are places in Iceland that simply need to be experienced. Vestmannaeyjar (the Westman Islands) fill that group by virtue of their natural beauty, the bounty of their wildlife, particularly birds, and by being historically and geographically one of Iceland's most distinctive places. The islands are part of a young and still active submarine volcanic system, most of them coming into being 10-20.0000 years ago. The passenger and car ferry Herjólfur makes the trip from Landeyjahöfn in 40 minutes. From Reykjavík the trip by air is only 20 minutes by Eagle Air.

Vík - Mýrdalshreppur

Vík is Iceland's most southerly village. Although this community of about 600 inhabitants faces the open Atlantic, Vík is the only seaside settlement in Iceland left without a harbour due to natural circumstances. Nevertheless, Vík's inhabitants go fishing with the help of their amphibious boats, which enable them to drive, literally, out to sea. The average precipitation in Vík is the highest in the whole of Iceland - which of course means that there is a lot of rain, snow, wind, sleet, hail and fog here. This is, however, not always the case as the weather here changes very rapidly; the sun comes back out, and therefore rainbows are probably more frequent and vivid here than anywhere else.

The natural beauty of the area is spectacular. There are many places of interest in the vicinity of Vík. Just east of the outskirts of the village lies one of Europe's biggest arctic tern breeding grounds. South of Vík there is a beautiful beach, which Lonely Planet revealed Europe's fifth best beach in 2015. A short hike within the close vicinity of Vík is sure to satisfy all serious nature lovers and bird-watchers. To the south of Reynisfjall mountain a spectacular set of rock columns called Reynisdrangar rise majestically out of the Atlantic Ocean.

Dyrhólaey, where the unique rock arch is found, is a 120 m high promontory in the western part of the Mýrdalur district. Dyrhólaey is Iceland's most southerly tip. North of Vík rises the bulk of the 700 km² Mýrdalsjökull glacier; Iceland's fourth largest. Approximately 600 metres below the ice lies the dormant sub-glacial volcano Katla. Katla is one of Iceland's most active volcanoes, and has on average erupted twice a century; the last occasion being in 1918.

Vík has good travel services and offers plenty of camping and hotel space (Edda Hotel). Among the many aspects of Vík that make it attractive to tourists are the increasingly popular sea-and-land trips in boats, sight-seeing flights, snowmobile trips, ice-climbing and dogsledding on Mýrdalsjökull glacier; excellent salmon and trout fishing; horseback riding, a wool centre and a fish farm / retail outlet of smoked salmon, to list but a few. Not many other places in Iceland offer as many contrasts of nature as Mýrdalur. The area is therefore an ideal place to visit for travellers who want to enjoy good service and the best of what the country's natural environment has to offer.

Skaftárhreppur

Skaftárhreppur district is the easternmost part of Katla Global Geopark with an array of internationally important geological features and the gateway to the western part of Vatnajökull National Park. This is the perfect location to stay while taking day tours to see many of Iceland's best known natural treasures. This is an area where saga meets lava and is easily accessible all year round. Through the app Locatify Smartguide you can find two audio-guides "The Laki eruption 1783-1784" and "Klaustur trail" and learn more about the history of the area.

Kirkjubæjarklaustur - Skaftárhreppur

Kirkjubæjarklaustur; abbreviated "Klaustur", lies just off the main road at a round-about and is the only place between Vík and Höfn which offers services, including a fuel station, a bank, a post office and a supermarket. The information center of the National Park and Katla Global Geopark is situated within the village. You can purchase the brochure "Klaustur trail" at the information center and do pay a visit to the local craft store in the basement of the same building.

"Klaustur" was known in earlier times as "Kirkjubær" (Church Farm) an important farming estate and a nunnery but has developed into a village of about 150 inhabitants. At the westernmost part of the village there is a particular and beautiful waterfall, Systrafoss, running from a lake situated above the seaworn cliffs with marked trails to follow for fairly easy walks. There is an educational trail around the lowland area including a lovely geosite close to the village, namely Kirkjugólf (Church Floor), a protected natural monument of basalt columns, eroded and shaped by wind and waves, giving the appearance of a paved church floor.

Other geosites of the area include the Laki craters, the Eldgjá fissure, the protected moss covered Laki lava flow, Skaftáreldahraun, and pseudocraters deriving from Eldgjá fissure eruption. The Laki road, just west of Kirkjubæjarklaustur, leads into the highlands and to the magnificent geosite Fjaðrárgljúfur gorge. The circular Landbrot/Meðalland road takes you along the protected pseudocraters of Landbrotshólar with many geological and historical treasures along the road. The Álfaver road is a circular route in the west leading through the pseudocraters of Álfaver and past the convent ruins and church of Þykkvabæjarklaustur. All these attractions and more contribute to the popularity of Kirkjubæjarklaustur as a nature tourism destiny.

Realm of Vatnajökull

The realm of Vatnajökull is a cluster of companies formed with the support of the South East Innovation Centre. It incorporates not only travel companies but also cultural and food processing enterprises. Our goal is to entwine the operations of the 80 different companies that are part of this project. The region as a whole is marketed under the name Realm of Vatnajökull (Ríki Vatnajökuls) with emphasis on locally produced goods, culinary souvenirs that can be traced directly to the region, handicrafts, design and other exceptional things. In this region, like in other areas of Iceland, many farmers have shifted from traditional farming to earning a living by providing travel services. Others have combined the best of both worlds by welcoming visitors with food and lodging while still farming their lands. The realm of Vatnajökull offers services, activities and accommodation all year round.

The inhabitants of the region do not only live in proximity to the Vatnajökull glacier but also to the Atlantic Ocean. The region is therefore known to be one of the finest places for seafood – especially for the Icelandic langoustine – as fishing has always been an important industry in Hornafjörður. In addition to its famous and wholesome cuisine, the clean and unspoiled nature is a hallmark of the Vatnajökull region. Here in the realm of Vatnajökull National Park and the largest glacier in the world outside the arctics, we believe that there is no boundary to what we can achieve when working together.

Höfn - Hornafjörður

Hornafjörður is a blooming community close to the largest glacier in Europe, Vatnajökull in the south eastern part of Iceland. The district's most densely populated area is Höfn, a lively fishing town in beautiful surroundings. In this region you are located at the base of Vatnajökull, and the scenery is breathtaking. Vatnajökull National Park is the largest national park in Europe, and the southern part of the park is situated in the community. In the last few decades tourism has grown enormously and is now a major economic sector in the community. Diverse services are provided, including hotels and other accommodation, camping sites, restaurants, shops, swimming pools, golf courses, marked hiking trails and various museums such as a maritime museum, Huldusteinn Mineral Collection, Þórbergssetur Cultural Centre in Hali, and Gamlabúð exhibition in Vatnajökull National Park Visitor Centre in Höfn.

Höfn's growth in the 20th century from a small village to today's town was a result of the development of a relatively diverse fishing industry. The landed catch is now more varied than in other fishing towns, including high-value species such as the Norway lobster or langoustine, but a good part of the Icelandic lobster catch is landed in Höfn. In recent years the town has promoted lobster as a central part of its image, for instance with a "lobster festival" that is held each summer and you'll be sure to find this mouthwatering delicacy at different restaurants in town. Höfn, which actually means harbour, welcomes visitors and offers diverse services to its guests.

Katla Global Geopark

Katla Global Geopark is a proud member of the UNESCO supported Global Geoparks Network

As well as presenting geological heritage of international significance, the purpose of a geopark is to explore and develop links between that geological heritage and the area's natural, cultural and intangible heritages and how earth's history has shaped every aspect of life and society. Katla Global Geopark invites you to learn about the area through enroute information panels, information centers, museums, hikes, maps and brochures. Make sure to enjoy the variable local production and seek local knowledge within the area.

Geology

Iceland lies astride the Mid-Atlantic Ridge where tectonic plates move apart from each other causing a rift zone. In addition a mantle plume is centred under the South of Iceland (Vatnajökull-glacier).

Katla Global Geopark covers about 9% of Iceland (9542 km²). The interaction between the rift zone and the mantle plume results in complex, diverse and frequent volcanic activity in the area, constantly changing the landscape and influencing the pattern of settlement. The Global Geopark is characterised by ice-capped central volcanoes. Outlet glaciers and glacial rivers flow from them resulting in glacial landforms such as moraines and ice-dammed lakes. Glacial outbursts associated with subglacial eruptions have formed outwash plains in the lowlands. Other internationally important geological features are rootless cones and lava fields, and the hyaloclastite ridges, eruptive craters and fissures which trend SW-NE, like the rift zone.

We invite you to practice sustainable nature tourism by:

- keeping to paths and trails
- respecting the vulnerability of flora and fauna
- taking all litter and excrement back with you from the nature
- not sleeping in cars outside of marked camp sites

For respect of our heritage please do not:

- damage geological features or take nature back home with you
- walk on the extremely fragile moss-covered lava
- build rock stacks
- drive off road at any time

Vatnajökull National Park

Introduction

Vatnajökull National Park, established in 2008, encompasses not only all of Vatnajökull glacier but also extensive areas surrounding it. These include the national parks previously existing at Skaftafell in the southwest and Jökulsárgljúfur in the north, so that the national park now covers 13% of Iceland and ranks as Europe's largest.

In general, national parks are protected areas which are considered unique because of their nature or cultural heritage. The unique qualities of Vatnajökull National Park are primarily its great variety of landscape features, created by the combined forces of rivers, glacial ice, and volcanic and geothermal activity.

Description

Vatnajökull is Europe's largest glacier; with a surface area of 8,100 km². Generally measuring 400-600 m in thickness and at the most 950 m, the glacial ice conceals a number of mountains, valleys and plateaus. It even hides some active central volcanoes, of which Bárðarbunga is the largest and Grímsvötn the most active. While the icecap rises at its highest to over 2,000 m above sea level, the glacier base reaches its lowest point 300 m below sea level. Nowhere in Iceland, with the exception of Mýrdalsjökull glacier, does more precipitation fall or more water drain to the sea than on the southern side of Vatnajökull. In fact, so much water is currently stored in Vatnajökull that the Icelandic river with the greatest flow, Ölfusá, would need over 200 years to carry this quantity of water to the sea.

The southern side of Vatnajökull is characterised by many high, majestic mountain ridges, with outlet glaciers descending between them down to the lowlands. The southernmost part of the glacier envelops the central volcano Örfajökull and Iceland's highest peak, Hvannadalshnúkur. Sheltered by the high ice, the vegetated oasis of Skaftafell overlooks the black sands deposited to its west by the river Skeiðará. These sands are mostly composed of ash which stems from the frequent eruptions in Grímsvötn and is carried to the coast by jökulhlaup, or glacial floods. Substantial volcanic activity also characterises the landscape west of Vatnajökull, where two of the world's greatest fissure and lava eruptions in historical times occurred, at Eldgjá in 934 and Lakagígar 1783-1784. Vonarskarð, northwest of the glacier, is a colourful high-temperature area and a watershed between North and South Iceland.

Preservation objectives

The objectives of designating Vatnajökull as a preservation area, along with the main regions it affects, are the following:

- To protect the nature of the region, including the landscape, biota and geological formations, as well as cultural features
- To allow the public to get to know and enjoy regional nature, culture and history
- To provide education on nature and nature conservation and on regional history, society and cultural features, as well as encouraging research to gain greater knowledge of these aspects
- To strengthen communities and business activity in the vicinity of the park.

Visitor centres and other tourist information offices working with the park

Visitor centres and other tourist information offices working with the park provide information and services for the park and its immediate environment. The following offices are situated along the south coast of Iceland:

Skafará Visitor Centre | Kirkjubæjarklaustur | open during the summer

Skaftafell Visitor Centre | Skaftafell | open all year
(except 25th December and 1st January)

Skálafell farm | Suðursveit | varying hours – all year

Hólmur farm | Mýrar | varying hours – all year

Höfelli farm | Nes | varying hours – all year

Gamlabúð, Information and visitor centre | Höfn | all year

The Golden Circle

The Golden Circle, “Uppsveitir Árnæssýslu”, is one of Iceland’s most popular tourist areas, rich in natural wonders and historical sites. To mention but a few places not to be missed while visiting: Þingvellir National Park, a UNESCO World Heritage Site, Geysir, the famous hot spring area, the golden waterfall of Gullfoss, the bishopry site in Skálholt, Þjórsárdalur valley and the Saga Age farm there, as well as Kerid, a volcanic crater. Also well worth a visit are several small charming villages, such as Flúðir, Laugarvatn and Sólheimar. The uplands stretch from Þingvellir National Park to the Þjórsá river and into the central highlands. The population of the area is about 2600 in four municipalities.

There is a great variety of services, accomodation, restaurants and activities in the area. Welcome!

The Golden Circle is now more like a Golden Chain, since new roads and bridges have opened up new opportunities. When travelling from Reykjavík there are several options, as follows:

1. Reykjavík – Þingvellir – Lyngdalsheiði – Laugarvatn – Geysir – Gullfoss – Reykholt – Hvítárbrú – Flúðir – Þjórsárdalur – Selfoss – Reykjavík
2. Reykjavík – Þingvellir – Lyngdalsheiði – Laugarvatn – Geysir – Gullfoss – Brúarhlöð – Flúðir – Hvítárbrú – Reykholt – Laugarás – Skálholt – Selfoss – Reykjavík
3. Reykjavík – Selfoss – Þjórsárdalur – Flúðir – Brúarhlöð – Gullfoss – Geysir – Reykholt – Grímsnes – Reykjavík
4. Reykjavík – Grímsnes – Skálholt – Laugarás – Flúðir – Hvítárbrú – Reykholt – Gullfoss – Geysir – Laugarvatn – Lyngdalsheiði – Þingvellir – Reykjavík

The Blue Circle

The Blue Circle is a route from Keflavík through Selvogur, Þorlákshöfn, Eyrarbakki, Stokkseyri, Selfoss and Hveragerði. The area offers a lot of different activities for travellers, such as surfing in the ocean at Þorlákshöfn, kayaking in Stokkseyri, horseback riding in Ölfus, hiking and biking tours around the hills in Hveragerði and bathing in natural geothermal pools. You can also visit one of Hveragerði’s many greenhouses and the Geothermal Park, the old church and the lighthouse at Selvogur, the Folk Museum in the Merchant’s House in Eyrarbakki, the Icelandic Wonders Museum in Stokkseyri and the Geothermal Energy Exhibition at Hellisheiði Power Plant.

The Volcano Circle – Katla Global Geopark

The Volcano Circle gives you an opportunity to experience at first hand why Iceland is called the land of ice and fire and how the community adjusts to the volcanic activity. The Eyjafjallajökull area offers a great variety of natural sites, such as Þórsmörk, the new mountain peaks of Magni and Móði, Eyjafjallajökull, Katla, one of the largest central volcanoes in Iceland, covered by the glacier Mýrdalsjökull, Seljalandsfoss waterfall, Skógafoss waterfall, Sólheimajökull glacier, Dyrhólaey rock arch, Lakagígar volcanic area and endless black beaches. All the sites can be accessed by walking, climbing, ATV-tours, on horseback or in jeeps.

But take great care! Most of the sites are easily accessible and close to the main roads, but some routes can be more dangerous due to unbridged rivers and highland tracks. It is easy to add a day to this circle tour and visit Vestmannaeyjar islands.

The circular route includes a drive from Reykjavík to Hvolsvöllur (106 km) and the Eyjafjallajökull area to Vík (90 km).

The History and Culture Circle

The History and Culture Circle is a perfect route to experience Iceland's history and culture at first hand in a magnificent environment. The culture is just as diverse as the landscape. A broad variety of museums and exhibitions in the Katla Geopark area gives a unique view into the core of Icelandic culture and heritage, such as Skógar Museum, Katla Centre in Vík, Skaftárstofa at Kirkjubæjarklaustur, the Icelandic Saga Centre at Hvolsvöllur and the Visitor Centre at Þorvaldseyri. Make sure not to miss the local food available in many of the area's restaurants, originating directly from the surrounding nature.

The Glacier Circle

The Glacier Circle is a magical route to experience the reason why Iceland got its name. The largest glacier outside the arctic, Vatnajökull, offers unique natural wonders, such as the magnificent Jökulsárlón (the Glacier Lagoon), where you can take a boat trip, and many spectacular glacier outlets, easily accessible for tourists, either walking, climbing, on ATV-tours, ski-doo's or jeeps. Make sure not to miss this fascinating experience while you are in Iceland.

The circular route includes a one hour flight from Reykjavík to Höfn and then a 450 km drive back from Höfn to Reykjavík with stops at glacier landmarks in the Vatnajökull Region.

1 Hveragerði Geothermal Park

Right inside the town of Hveragerði there is an area of hot springs from which the community derives its name (hver = hot spring). The hot springs of Hveragerði are among the most remarkable natural attractions of South Iceland. Visitors to the hot springs can learn about geothermal energy and the springs, which include Dynkur, spouting regularly, Ruslahver which has an interesting history, and many more.

2 Arnarker

Arnarker is an interesting cave in the Leitarhraun lava field. A marked path leads from the information sign by the road to the cave, and a ladder has been placed at its opening. Take great care when inspecting the cave.

3 Þingvellir National Park

At Þingvellir the national assembly was established around 930 and continued to convene there until 1798. Many crucial events in Icelandic history took place at Þingvellir and it is at the heart of Icelandic nationhood. No less remarkable is the geology of Þingvellir. Visitors can get an interpretation of the history and nature of Þingvellir and find hiking trails and camping grounds. Þingvellir is Iceland's oldest National Park and now on the UNESCO World Heritage List. It is listed as a national park (since 1928) because of the special tectonic and volcanic environment. The continental drift can be clearly seen in the cracks or faults which are traversing the region, the biggest one, Almannagjá, being a veritable canyon. This causes also the often measurable earthquakes in the area.

4 Keríð - Crater

A 55 m deep volcanic crater, about 3000 years old. It is part of a group of volcanic hills called Tjarnarhólar and it is now filled with water.

5 Þjórsárdalur Valley

Þjórsárdalur valley was the site of a flourishing Settlement Age community that was later abandoned and then disappeared under ash in 1104, when the volcano Mount Hekla erupted for the first time in the history of Iceland.

6 Stöng and The Saga-Age Farm

Sites of about 40 buildings have been unearthed in the Þjórsárdalur valley and the best preserved and most remarkable is the farmhouse at Stöng excavated in 1939. Based upon the Stöng farmhouse a replica Saga-Age farmhouse was built in 1974 to mark the 1100th anniversary of the settlement of Iceland. Open to the public all summer.

7 Geysir

Geysir has lent its name to the English language in order to christen the phenomenon of the periodically spouting hot springs. You can walk around the Geysir area, a geothermal field where hot springs are in abundance, geysers explode and pools of mud bubble. Strokkur gives a performance every few minutes, shooting a tower of water and steam 30 metres into the air and Blesi with water the colour of turquoise delights the senses.

8 Gullfoss - Waterfall

Gullfoss is actually two separate waterfalls, the upper one has a drop of 11 metres and the lower one 21 metres. The rock of the river bed was formed during an interglacial period. For thousands of years the river has followed its course delighting tourists with beauty and power.

9 Urriðafoss – Waterfall

Urriðafoss is a voluminous waterfall in Þjórsá river, where the river falls off the margin of Þjórsárhraun lava field (360 m³/sec) in beautiful and peaceful surroundings. Þjórsárhraun lava field is the greatest lava flow on earth since the Ice Age. The waterfall is located right off highway.

10 Hekla – Volcano

One of the most famous volcanoes in the world, Hekla is believed to have erupted at least twenty times since the settlement of Iceland, and five times in the 20th century. The last eruption was in February 2000.

11 Landmannalaugar – Volcano region

Landmannalaugar is a region near the volcano Hekla in the southern section of Iceland's highlands. The area displays a number of unusual geological elements, like the multi-coloured rhyolite mountains and expansive lava fields. The mountains in the surrounding area display a wide spectrum of colours.

12 Seljalandsfoss – Waterfall

Seljalandsfoss is just over 60 metres high in a lovely location, surrounded by cliffs and green slopes. A footpath leads behind the waterfall.

13 Merkjárfoss/Gluggafoss – Waterfall

The Merkjá River has several beautiful waterfalls, but the most outstanding is Gluggafoss or Window Falls (also known as Merkjárfoss). The upper half of the cliff is palagonite or tuff rock and the lower ledge is basalt. The river has formed tunnels and grooves through the soft rock and a series of 'windows' in the tunnels, thereby earning the name 'Gluggafoss'.

14 Þórsmörk - Valley

Þórsmörk is a beautiful woodland nature reserve surrounded by rugged and majestic mountains, glaciers and glacial rivers. Þórsmörk can only be reached all year round on 4 x 4 and scheduled busses during the summer. Two unique hiking paths lead to Þórsmörk; Laugavegur from Landmannalaugar and Fimmvörðuháls from Skógar.

15 Skógafoss - Waterfall

One of Iceland's most splendid waterfalls, Skógafoss tumbles 60 metres from the cliffs by Skógar. Before cascading off the cliffs as Skógafoss, the river flows through the Skógárgil gorge, which boasts more than twenty more waterfalls, each with its own charm.

16 Mýrdalsjökull - Glacier

Mýrdalsjökull's peak reaches 1493 metres and Katla Volcano inside the glacier erupts on average every 40-60 years. Sixteen eruptions have been recorded since the settlement of Iceland over 1100 years ago, the last one in 1918.

17 Sólheimajökull - Glacier

Sólheimajökull glacier flows south of Mýrdalsjökull glacier in a U-shaped valley. It is about 8 km long and 1-2 km wide. The glacier advanced about 900 metres during the last few centuries, but retreated greatly from 1930 to 1964.

18 Dyrhólaey - headland

Sheer headland rising 120 metres out of the sea with a huge natural arch near Vík í Mýrdal. Reynisdrangar sea stacks, Eldhraun lava fields and Mýrdalssandur sands are also magnificent sights. An amazing area of strength and beauty.

19 Hjörleifshöfði - headland

Hjörleifshöfði is a 221 meter high headland made of tuff. For a long time after the last ice age it was an island but by the time of the settlement it was an isthmus on the side of a fjord. Now it lies more than two kilometers from the sea.

20 Fjaðrárgljúfur - Canyon

Fjaðrárgljúfur is a magnificent and massive canyon, about 100 metres deep and about two kilometres long. The canyon has sheer walls, and is somewhat serpentine and narrow. The river Fjaðrá has its source in the mountain Geirlandshraun and falls off the heath edge in this stunning canyon until it makes it down into Skaftá river.

21 Lakagígur - Craters

Lakagígur (Laki Craters) lie in a row, 25 km in length, in Síðumannafréttur in the Highlands. The craters stretch from the tuff mountain Hnúta to the northeast through Mt. Laki (818 m above sea level), ending at Vatnajökull. Mt. Laki commands splendid views of the craters and the surrounding landscape. Lakagígur are a part of Vatnajökull National Park, the largest national park in Europe.

22 Eldgjá - Eruptive fissure

In Skaftártunguafréttur, in West-Skafta-fellssýsla, close to Kirkjubæjarklaustur, the eruptive fissure Eldgjá is to be found. Eldgjá is an approximately 40 km long eruptive fissure, approximately 600 metres wide in many places, and up to 200 metres deep. When it was formed, probably around 934, there were probably eruptions along the whole extent of it. Plans to make Eldgjá and its surrounding area a part of Vatnajökull National Park are in place.

23 Langisjör - Lake

Langisjör is a lake which is 20 km long and 2 km wide in some places. The lake is to the southwest of Vatnajökull, between the mountains Tungnárjöll and Fögrufjöll, in a beautiful and picturesque landscape. Its square measure is 27 km², it reaches a depth of 75 m and the water surface is 670 m above sea level. The view of mountains at the lake is magnificent, the lake is among the purest mountain lakes in Iceland.

24 Vatnajökull National Park - Europe's largest

The national park includes the ice cap and its surroundings, with a total area of 13,600 km², or 13% of Iceland. Few places in the world exhibit such a wide range of natural phenomena. The battle between ice and fire still rages within the park boundaries. Much of Southeast Iceland lies within the realm of the park, giving quick access to the glacier. Vatnajökull - the world's biggest glacier outside of the arctic regions. The glacier seems so close to the people of Southeast Iceland that they sometimes refer to the ice as if it were part of their backyard. Each of the icefalls and glacier tongues flowing towards the lowlands possesses an individual character and offers a variety of scenes.

25 Skaftafell and Svartifoss - Waterfall

Öræfi was Iceland's most isolated district before the bridges to the west of it were completed in the early seventies. The natural contrasts are breathtaking: black sands below white glaciers, desolate wastes and green vegetation. Such a green oasis welcomes you at Skaftafell, just beside the broad desert of the Skeiðarársandur sands and the raging Skeiðará river. These contrasts and many more remind the visitor of nature's changeability.

26 Öræfajökull – Glacier

Extending south from the Vatnajökull ice cap and towering to 2115 m, Öræfajökull is Iceland's highest mountain. Its height actually depends on the season and the depth of snow, since the peak itself, Hvannadalshnjúkur, is topped by ice which is thickest in spring and thinnest in autumn. The mountain and its vicinity are very popular among hikers and skiers.

27 Ingólfshöfði – Headland

At the edge of the Atlantic Ocean, Ingólfshöfði is a headland which is isolated by black sands and perilous rivers from the rest of the mainland. However, it is home to thousands of nesting seabirds, especially puffins and the great skua. This historical cape is named after the first settler of Iceland, Ingólfur Arnarson, who spent his first winter there with his family after moving to Iceland, 874-875.

28 Jökulsárlón - Glacial lagoon

The size of the main lagoon, called Jökulsárlón, is about 20 square kilometres. In 1932 the same area was still covered by ice. Many species of fish are found there, as well as seals, which can number into the hundreds during winter.

29 Haukafell – Mountain

In 1985 the local Forestry Society started planting saplings at Haukafell. Not only are the trees now becoming established, but there are bountiful berries to be picked every August. This pleasant outdoor spot also has a good campsite and washing facilities.

30 Heinaberg – Mountain

The Heinaberg area is part of the national park, and offers interesting sets of basalt columns in addition to the glacier tongue Heinabergsjökull and the lagoon. The valley Heinabergsdalur, 7 km long, reaches to Vatnsdalur valley, which ice used to dam off and keep full of water. Nowadays, the view down into the valley is magnificent, since massive icebergs are often left stranded along its floor. You will find numerous hiking trails starting by the gabbro mountain named Geitafell, at the edge of the glacier.

31 Lónsöræfi / Stafellsfjöll – Mountains

The Stafellsfjöll mountains, today also called Lónsöræfi, dominate the skyline east of Vatnajökull glacier and have long included one of Iceland's most extensive protected areas. Besides the deep, rugged canyons, the landscape displays a wide range of colours due to rhyolite and other attractive rocks. In contrast, there are lushly vegetated, sheltered valleys, and a good chance of spotting reindeer. The numerous trails make this a perfect hiking territory.

Birds of South Iceland

Birds of South Iceland is a program offering excellent year-round services for birdwatchers. South Iceland has a great deal to offer visiting birdwatchers with its wide variety of habitats, including wetlands, seabird colonies, highland oases and unique coastlines. The largest colonies of puffins, pink-footed geese and great skuas in the world are located within this region, together with Europe's largest leach's storm-petrel colony. South Iceland has a wide range of accommodation from camp sites to 4-star hotels and some within a short driving distance from Reykjavik.

Hornafjörður and Skarðsfjörður are shallow fjords or coastal lagoons on either side of the village of Höfn. The area is home to large numbers of birds all year around. Not only is it an important staging area on migration, but breeding birds are well represented in spring and summer and it is also the region's main wintering area for birds. A rich mosaic of wetlands stretches from Höfn all the way west to the glacial sands of Breiðamerkursandur.

The bird life of the great glacial sands of the south coast has a character all of its own. It is the kingdom of the great skua and home to the largest colony of this charismatic species on Earth. Wherever there is sufficient water, vegetation sprouts up and attracts a range of birds. The spectacular Skaftafell in Vatnajökull National Park contains woodlands and a variety of species.

Heiðagæs – Pink-footed goose

The areas Landbrot and Meðalland support a wide range of birds. The region's wetlands are varied and include flood-meadows, lakes, springs, streams and lava fields. Breeding birds include horned grebe and various ducks. The freshwater springs attract numerous birds in the winter and form important wintering grounds for barrow's goldeneye, common goldeneye and goosander. White-fronted geese are common visitors on spring and autumn passage. Great skuas are conspicuous on the glacial sands.

The valley of Mýrdalur is a rich birding area, with Reynisfjall, Reynisdrangar and Dyrhólaey the chief birding sites. Puffins breed on the cliffs at Víkurhamrar above the village of Vík (the furthest colony from the sea in the world), on Reynisfjall mountain and the headland Dyrhólaey, while common guillemot and razor-bill breed at the sea stacks Reynisdrangar and at Dyrhólaey. There is a huge arctic tern colony at Vík and a smaller one at Dyrhólaey.

Lundi – Puffin

Þjórsárver to the south of the glacier Hofsjökull is the most expansive oasis in the central highlands. It is an area of spectacular scenery, with rich swathes of vegetation alternating with barren sands and glaciers. The area represents very important breeding and moulting grounds for pink-footed geese. Other breeders include the great northern diver, the whooper swan, the long-tailed duck, the purple sandpiper, the red-necked phalarope, the arctic tern and the snow bunting. Part of Þjórsárver is protected and a Ramsar site.

Another key birding location in the highlands is the chain of lakes called Veiðivötn. This beautiful and unusual landscape has been shaped by repeated volcanic activity and most of the lakes are located in craters. Great northern divers are particularly common, and other breeding birds include the whooper swan, the pink-footed goose, the scaup, the long-tailed duck, the harlequin duck, the ringed plover, the purple sandpiper, the arctic tern and the snow bunting. Barrow's goldeneye winters here and has recently bred.

Himbrimi – Great northern diver

Straumönd – Harlequin duck

Lakes, ponds and marshes can be found across the lowland areas of Landeyjar and Rangarárvellir. Some of the best birding sites are the lake Skúmsstaðavatn and surroundings, Oddaflóð (protected) and lake Lambhagavatn. Large numbers of wildfowl and waders breed in the area and pass through in the spring and autumn.

Two of the larger lakes in the area, Apavatn and Laugarvatn, along with adjoining wetlands and rivers, are among the best sites for ducks in South Iceland. Barrow's goldeneye, common goldeneye and goosander winter here.

Kría – Arctic tern

Harlequin ducks breed locally and hundreds of scaup, tufted duck and red-breasted merganser stop off on passage and are also common breeders.

Sogið, the river which flows out of lake Þingvallavatn, is one of Iceland's best locations for winter ducks. It is home to the largest flock of barrow's goldeneye outside Mývatn and is the main winter site for the common goldeneye in Iceland. Goosander, red-breasted merganser and tufted duck are common. White-tailed eagles are often seen in winter and harlequin ducks move up the river in spring. Lake Þingvallavatn itself is known for its breeding great northern divers.

The coastline between the mouths of the great glacial rivers Ölfusá and Þjórsá is the largest lava shoreline in Iceland and forms the southern end of the vast Þjórsáhraun lava field which flowed 8000 years ago and is the largest post ice age lava flow on Earth. Inland there are myriad lakes and ponds. The area hosts an array of birds all year and it is of particular importance for migrants such as knot, dunlin, sanderling, turnstone, brent goose, Eurasian wigeon and various other ducks.

On either side of the estuary of the river Ölfusá there are two large wetlands: BirdLife Iceland's reserve at Flói on the east bank, and Ölfusforir on the west bank. Both are large expanses of pools and lakes which attract numerous birds in the breeding season and on passage alike. The red-throated diver is the characteristic bird of the Flói reserve and dunlin and black-tailed godwit are particularly common here. Ölfusforir is an excellent birding location in winter; attracting large flocks of teal, mallard and goosander, as well as Iceland's largest concentration of the grey heron.
